there is ample shelter for a whole army, situated on the left bank of the river, and the other, by the guns of the fort. The officers at the fort do not expect to leave the fort in less than three days.

COBLENZ, July 25th.
At 4 on Sunday morning, 300 Prussians crossed the line near Sankenheim, a few miles (about 50 miles) from Metz, and after encountering scattered portions of the French Chasseurs, the Prussians took position and sent flying detachments along the line of the river, until Strasbourg and Metz, of which they were, up the river, blow up a viaduct and did considerable other damage. The Prussians then returned to Saarburg.

LONDON, July 25th.
The Prince of Wales has gone to Denmark to inform that country he is strictly neutral. The Prussian authorities of a granted permission, the newspaper correspondent to follow the army.

The Prussians are concentrating a powerful force at Metz. The Prussians are using balloons for observation. The Prussian Mail Gazette says, now that the real design of the French Emperor are revealed, it is, however, to make every preparation for war.

PARIS, July 25th.
The Empress, when at Chateaubert, read to the sailors of the fleet an address from the Emperor, in which he said, "I think you are my thoughts are with you, and follow you to those where your valor will be displayed. The French navy is a glorious one, and you will be the first to show it in front of the enemy's fleet. France is with you and calls for the protection of Heaven upon your arms. I am proud to see the sea your brethren will fight on the land for the same cause. Go and show with pride the national standard. When they see it, the enemy will know that it is the honor and glory of France."

After delivering the above the Empress was overcome with emotion. The effect of her visit to the fleet is said to be great.

THE FRENCH, July 25th.
The extreme rigor with which the French in Germany are treated, while Germany in France is in no way molested or restricted, was commented on by the Ministers to-day.

LONDON, July 25th.
A special dispatch from Strasbourg received to-day says the status of the French army is concentrated at the Elz and Belfort. The Algerian forces, consisting of Zouaves and Turcos, reached Strasbourg on the 24th and took line. Strasbourg is being shelled by the French, and arrived to-day by Lyons.

Persons residing under the walls of Paris have been notified to quit their homes, as the city is required to be a place of arms. The French forces at Metz are estimated at 80,000. The Imperial Guard is at Nancy. The French report that the Prussians are in the line and lost three officers.

PARIS, July 25th.
The French gunboats to operate on the Rhine and rivers of Prussia are being transported from Metz in sections of the Rhine.

The Paris Journal of the 24th of this morning says Marshal Lelievre has been telegraphed to the Emperor that Gen. Bismarck had repudiated the reconnaissance of the enemy near the town of Niederbrunn, 20 miles north of Metz. One officer (a Bavarian) was killed and two made prisoners.

The figures in its account of affairs insist that the officer who was killed was an Englishman.

LONDON, July 25th.
Nearly all the journals have editorial remarks this morning on the recent treaty. All are similar in tone. "France must explain this offensive treaty," are the words of the Times and the burden of the London press. The peculiarity is seen in the fact that a protest for the intervention of England in favor of Prussia.

LONDON, July 25th.
France has inquired, through Russia, on what conditions peace will be made. Prussia's reply to Russia was embodied in four words: "It is too late."

BRUSSELS, July 25th.
A detachment of French troops, consisting of three companies of infantry and eighty horsemen, arrived at the next English Mail. The French troops were repulsed, with the loss of one officer and eight men. One Prussian soldier was wounded.

Another account of yesterday's skirmish says a detachment of 500 French infantry and cavalry crossed the frontier and attacked 600 Prussian infantry near Beckingen. The engagement lasted half an hour. The French retreated, leaving one officer and 80 soldiers on the field. The Prussians had one seriously and two slightly wounded.

In the Commons, to-night, the Government was asked if any orders prohibiting the exportation of coal had been issued. The answer was in the affirmative. The Government General replied that no such order had been issued; and he added that it would be impossible to legally seize and detain a vessel on a vessel in the service of a belligerent.

PARIS, July 25th.
Prince Napoleon is on the Emperor's staff. Large bodies of the French troops are moving north coast from Metz.

PARIS, July 25th.
The following is the proclamation of the Emperor to the army, assuming command in person, issued at Metz to the soldiers yesterday:

"I come to take my place at your head to defend the honor of our country. You are to fight to combat against one of the best armed of the European countries. But other countries as gallant as this have not been able to resist your valor. It is the same to-day. The war which now commences will be long and hardy contested, for its theatre will be the most fertile in the world. But your spirit will triumph. But nothing is beyond the perseverance and efforts of the soldiers of Africa, Italy and Mexico. You have overcome them. You have been able to accomplish, animated by a sense of duty, maintained by discipline, influenced by love of country. Whatever road we may take across our frontier, we will find it glorious. We are the sons of our fathers, and will show ourselves worthy of them."

PARIS, July 25th.
The feeling against England is still most intense, and seems to be shared by people of all classes. The press is unparalyzing in its attacks on England. A journal says England evidently wants another alliance against France.

BRUSSELS, July 25th.
Early this morning a large force of Prussian division, and four pieces of artillery, crossed the frontier, and were met by a force of Prussian guards, who had taken position a mile and a half from Luxembourg. The Prussians were attacked in the evening with vigor, and after a sharp fight, the French were repulsed, and retreated, leaving one gun and losing twenty men. The Prussians lost eight men.

LONDON, July 25th.
The Lord Mayor gave a grand banquet to the Ministers last night. Gladstone spoke of England's position in the war as follows:

"The first idea of England is neutrality; but second idea is preparation for the worst; and her neutrality is not indifference, but a policy of isolation. It is dictated by the necessity of mitigating the evils of war, and of confining them within the smallest possible circle, and of retaining the peace of the world at the proper moment. Nothing will be done to forfeit the friendship of either party, and nothing will be done to retain their confidence, so that we may still remain perfectly acquiescent in the most momentous and miserable effort witnessed by mankind."

LONDON, July 25th.
The excitement about England's position continues, and the Government policy is under discussion. The supplementary war budget will be introduced.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.
HONGKONG, Sept. 3rd, Evening.
The market for Bengal grain remained quiet, with nominal quotations for Patna 6000, and Benares 5500. Sales, however, have been effected for forward delivery of Patna on being landed at 5082 1/2. In Benares nothing was done. The steamer Odessa arrived in the afternoon with about 1300 chests, which speculative transactions of Patna were done at 570 on three weeks time, but to a very small extent. The market closed at the following rates: Patna, 577 1/2, to 582 1/2, for first quality; Patna on time, 577 1/2, to 582 1/2.
